*In November 2002, Congress reauthorized and revised the Juvenile Accountability Block Grant (JABG) and the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act. The new law resulted in different funding categories beginning in FY 2004.

**The $64.4 million for Title V in FY06 and FY07 includes $60 million in earmarks: $10 million for the tribal youth program, $25 million for gang resistance education and training program, and $25 million for grants to enforce State laws prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages to minors.

***No FY08 funding levels were proposed by the Administration for any of the current Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention programs. Instead, the Administration has proposed a single, new "Child Safety and Juvenile Justice" block grant at a level that is 25% lower than the total FY07 funding for the programs eliminated.

****The $65.0 million for Title V in the Senate in FY08 includes $40 million in earmarks: $10 million for the tribal youth program, $5 million for Big Brothers / Big Sisters, and $25 million for grants to enforce State laws prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages to minors.
