The Urgent Need to Rebuild:

Cuts in Two-Thirds of Human Needs Programs Must Be Reversed

Human needs programs have lost ground to inflation for more than a decade. In the recently passed FY 2022 omnibus appropriations bill, some welcome progress was made, providing increases over the previous year in certain important health, mental health, education, and housing programs. But for far too many human needs programs tracked annually by the Coalition on Human Needs, the progress has not erased long-term losses. In the 186 programs shown in CHN's appropriations table, 118 (nearly two-thirds, or 63 percent) saw cuts from FY 2010 through FY 2022, adjusted for inflation. Nearly one-third (58 programs; 31 percent) lost 20 percent or more over this period.

The programs CHN tracks are of special importance to people with low incomes; many are means-tested. They serve vulnerable groups such as people with disabilities and immigrants. Services listed here reach every age group, from babies to the aging; they are of disproportionate importance to communities of color. They protect women and LGBTQ people from harm.

The nation now faces compounded threats that must be addressed. Two years of pandemic have caused illness, pushed millions out of the labor force, disrupted child care, interrupted education, and increased hunger and the threat of eviction. Rising prices spurred at first by the pandemic and now by the war in Ukraine are costing the average family over $300 per month. The programs listed here must receive funding increases in FY 2023 to respond to these urgent needs.

Across all domestic and international (non-defense) programs, spending declined by 3 percent from FY 2010 – FY 2022, taking inflation and population growth into account, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities. But setting aside the rapidly growing veterans' medical care expenditures, the rest of these programs declined fully 9 percent.

The losses for many of the programs of special importance to people with low incomes are far deeper. The Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) plummeted more than 40 percent since FY 2010, taking inflation but not population growth into account. With home heating, cooling and electricity costs soaring now, reversing LIHEAP's losses is one of our urgent needs. Adult and youth job training programs are down nearly 20 percent, especially counter-productive with many jobs going unfilled now. Community Service Employment for Older Americans has declined more than 60 percent. In the aftermath of COVID, already serious levels of mental health problems among children have spiked, but Children's Mental Health funding has dropped 18 percent since FY 2010. Education funds for our most vulnerable children, youth and adults have declined: special education grants for infants and families cut 10 percent; neglected and delinquent youth and migrant student education down 24 percent; and career and vocational education cut 13 percent. Juvenile justice programs have been slashed 30 percent. Despite a significant erosion in our affordable housing stock, public housing operating funds have declined by over 15 percent since FY 2010.

COVID has widened gaps between poor and more affluent children, in education performance and access to services. Mothers cannot work for lack of affordable child care. The aging and people with disabilities need community-based services and housing. If we are to meet our urgent needs, FY 2023 human needs appropriations must increase enough to make up years of lost ground.
